Tamaño xs

The screenshot shows the same landing page but in extra small (xs) screen size. The "CURSO HTML5" header and the pink navigation bar are present. The main content area is simplified. The "HTML5" section is now the only visible one, showing its logo and a brief description about new structural elements and video/audio support, along with a "Ir a..." button. The other sections are collapsed or removed.
